WINTER SESSION
ARCHAEOLOGY FIELD SCHOOL IN BELIZE (ANTY 467)

Learn about Maya prehistory and archaeological techniques

On an imposing hill stands Cahal Pech, a prehistoric ceremonial center. Our excavations focus on the final years of the Maya occupation. You will learn about Maya culture prehistory; practice archaeological field techniques; and gain skills in identifying and processing artifacts.

Requirements You must be in good standing, an undergraduate with a 2.5 GPA, or a graduate student. A $2,563 special fee covers room/board, transportation in Belize, instruction, & field trips. A round trip ticket to Belize and incidentals are not covered and vary by student. You must enroll in ANTY 467, which counts in your spring 2018 semester load (4 credits).

Deadline for application October 16
