The Humanities Institute is pleased to announce:

The Richard Drake Writing Award for Student Essays in the Humanities

Spring 2018 Award winners:

Undergraduate Student Winner: Ryan Garnsey, "Dostoyevsky: Definite Circumstances and the Character of an Individual"

Graduate Student Winner: Dwight Curtis, “The Play Within the Play: Eschaton, Hamlet, and 'Theater-Boundaries' in Infinite Jest”

The Richard Drake Writing Award honors excellence in writing in the humanities in the College of Humanities and Sciences, and is awarded to one undergraduate and one graduate student per year. Papers focusing on history, literature, philosophy, religion, politics and the classics are considered. Papers are judged on the basis of excellence in writing, imagination in research, and force of argument.
