Named in honor of former history professor H. Duane Hampton, the Hampton Fund supports two departmental programs. It funds an annual lecture by a leading scholar or specialist in public history or the history of the American West. In addition to delivering a public talk, the Hampton Lecturer also leads a seminar at the History Department’s Lockridge History Workshop. Recent speakers have included Bancroft Prize winner Thomas Andrews and Journal of American History editor Edward Linenthal. The Hampton Fund also supports the training of History Department graduate students by providing annual research and travel grants, which are used to conduct research at out-of-town archives and libraries or to present research at professional conferences. Recent recipients have used the grants to conduct research at the Hoover Library and Archives at Stanford University and the Boston Athenaeum.

For more information on the Hampton Fund, please contact Professor Jeff Wiltse (jeff.wiltse@mso.umt.edu) or Professor Kyle G. Volk (kyle.volk@umontana.edu).