Overview of the Northern Rockies Model Arab League Program

As representatives of the Arab League’s 22 member-states, student delegates work to achieve consensus on questions real-life diplomats wrestle with daily. They vote on resolutions they have written that seek to resolve some of the Arab countries’ most difficult challenges. The dynamics and interactive nature of the role-playing among the students stimulate critical thinking, heighten creativity, expand knowledge, and cultivate understanding as no book, video, or coursework ever could.

Participation in a Model is of value to all students regardless of their academic major. It matters little if at all whether their school has an academic course offering on the Arab countries, the Middle East, or the Islamic world. Students gain invaluable firsthand leadership experience and hands-on training. They acquire this through the Model’s constant challenges and interaction in the course of public discussion, the application of time management skills, the use of parliamentary procedure, and the dynamics of debating, writing, and editing. All this occurs under pressure and tight deadlines that mirror the actual realities and tensions inherent in the give-and-take that comes with activism in public affairs.

In experiencing how a resolution they have prepared succeeds or fails on the basis of whether their fellow delegates find its rationale sufficiently persuasive, student delegates also refine their interpersonal skills. At the final session, adult judges with experience in international relations announce the names of individual students and delegations whose performance has earned them highly coveted awards. These and other student participants are provided priority consideration for partial scholarships in the National Council’s language and area studies academic programs in the Arab world.

At the end of any Model, all delegates come away having practiced and improved considerably the kinds of skills that will serve them well all their life in any field they pursue. This one-of-a-kind practical experience brings students and their faculty advisers back year after year.

Course Description and Goals:

This course will introduce its students to the Arab world; its countries, politics, cultures, peoples and issues. By representing national delegations and focusing on the specifics of individual countries and various contemporary issues, students will be given a more intimate knowledge of the region through active participation as delegates. Instruction will be delivered by the Lecturer and enhanced by Staff (student leadership) participation, and guest lecturers who will speak to the class each week about different countries, cultures, and issues that are relative to their respective fields of study. Students will also learn parliamentary procedures used in institutions such as the Arab League itself; this mode of discourse will provide the basis for which students debate topics in class in order to better understand the region, and prepare for the Northern Rockies Model Arab League Conference in April. Student delegates will be expected to compile a binder consisting of one country paper, one committee paper, two prepared resolutions, and any additional pertinent documents; as well as full participation in the April Conference.

1. The objective learning outcome of the course is for students to learn and understand more about the history, politics, and culture of the Arab world through class discussion and independent research. Students’ success in the course will be determined through their ability to think critically about issues facing the Arab world, as well as their ability to thoughtfully engage in class discussion and ask engaging and thought provoking questions of visiting lecturers. Their success will also be assessed based on their performance at the Northern Rockies Model Arab League Conference at the end of the course.

2. Students are presented with peer reviewed articles on various topics concerning the Arab World including, economic, social, cultural, and political affairs. Students will be required to keep up with current events of the 22 Arab League countries. They will also read relevant historic documents and treaties. Students taking the course for honors credit will be required to do extra research into assigned topics in order to engage more thoroughly with visiting speakers and at the conference.

3. Students will be required to write two papers and several resolutions pertaining to their assigned country and topic. The first will focus/outline the history of their assigned country. The second paper will define their country’s position on a specific committee topic. Each student will be expected to draft several resolutions pertaining to a committee topic. Each of the assignments is designed to benefit the student and help them learn as much about their country as possible before they have to formally represent that country at the conference. Assignments will be evaluated/graded based on accuracy, depth of research, format, and whether it meets all specified requirements. In order to complete all that is expected of them, students must do extensive research into their assigned countries and committee topics. In their research they must attempt to relate their country’s history to current events and put it in context with regional relationships and policies.

4. The course is designed so that a different guest lecturer gives a presentation each week, so students will have the unique opportunity to engage in thoughtful discussion with a new professor every week. The class size is small enough to allow in depth conversation between a small group of students and a diverse faculty.

5. The small class size and discussion based format allows optimum intellectual exchange among students. Each class period students will discuss and debate the assigned readings, resolutions, and presentations often through parliamentary procedure. Students are encouraged to express their views on the various issues and policy matters concerning the Arab World, and will receive participation grading based on their involvement in class discussion.

6. Students are presented with difficult and ethically complex problems and proposals, ranging from the Palestine Israel conflict, terrorism, economic and environmental stress, and human rights. They will be expected to debate these issues and produce policy proposals to address them.

Course Requirements and Expectations:

Class Participation:

Participation consists of two components; your physical presence in the class, and your informed contributions to class discussions. Readings will be assigned and it is expected that students will come to class having read the materials for that day ready to add to the comprehension of the topic. Participation will demand your vocal presence in the class using past knowledge and information from the readings to increase both your understanding and that of the other students in the class. Participation will constitute 20 percent of the final grade.

Written Assignments:

Written assignments will constitute 40 percent of the final grade; 15 percent for each of the two papers (30 percent), and 5 percent for each of the two resolutions prepared for the conference (10 percent). Guidelines for the aforementioned assignments are as follows:

Country Paper

Due in class- Tuesday February 22nd, 2011
The goal of this assignment is to improve your general knowledge of your country before you begin research on your committee’s topics. Please research your assigned country’s history and current events. Provide a succinct, three page paper that highlights the central points of 1. your country’s general profile information (including religion, population, geography, leadership, languages, ethnicities, economics, etc.), 2. history (history of colonial occupation, creation of modern nation state, etc.), 3. pertinent current events and general points of interest (including your country’s general relations with neighboring countries, especially immediate neighbors). This paper is extremely important as it will be the basis that you will use in both your Position Paper, and during your committee sessions during the conference.

Position Paper

Due in class- Tuesday March 15th, 2011
This assignment will be based on the www.ncusar.org agenda for your assigned committee. It will be a specific analysis of your country’s standing on the issues outlined in the agenda. The paper will be 7-8 pages in length, and it should address all four of the agenda items found in your committee agenda, as there will be resolutions concerning all four of the topics. Pay special attention to how the issues raised in the various topics concerns the interests of your country and its allies.

Grading of Papers

Each paper is worth 15 percent of your final grade (30 percent total), the grading of both papers will be based upon the following.

- 5% Grammar and Organization
- 5% Accuracy of Information
- 5% Substance and Content

Source Documentation

Please document your sources in MLA format with a complete bibliography. Use at minimum three sources in each paper (note: it is likely that many sources will need to be used to provide an accurate picture of many of these countries and their issues, as events unfold constantly that change the political and cultural landscapes), at least one of these sources must be the BBC Country Profiles found at http://news.bbc.co.uk/2/hi/country_profiles/default.stm. Other sources should be articles from major news publications, academic journals, and scholastic articles, Wikipedia is not an acceptable source. Remember not citing sources for information constitutes plagiarism.

Pre-drafted Resolutions

Due in class- Tuesday March 29th, 2011

In preparation for the conference delegates will write two prepared resolutions containing substantive recognition of and solutions to topics raised in the respective committee agendas. Resolutions will be turned in with binders to be assessed and graded before the conference.

Binders

Due in class- Tuesday March 29th, 2011

Delegates will compile a binder consisting of their two papers, two resolutions, a Model Arab League parliamentary procedures guide, and any documents deemed by the delegate to be especially pertinent to the discussion and resolution of issues within their committees, (i.e. past Arab League resolutions, Charter of the League of Arab States, past U.N. resolutions, Geneva Convention, International Convention on Human Rights, etc.).

Northern Rockies Model Arab League Conference:

The Northern Rockies Model Arab League Conference will be held April 7th, 8th, and 9th, 2011. Students are expected to be on time to all meetings, in proper attire, with respectful attitude and action towards all student delegates, student staff, student leadership, faculty members and advisors, and university community members. Student delegates will participate according to the various stances, principles, and alliances that their respective countries have held in the past and at present with an aim towards passing substantive resolutions that create positive change for the parties affected by the issues discussed in each committee. During all committee and summit sessions, student delegates will show respect and deference to the judgments of the respective chairs presiding over the meetings. It is the responsibility of the chair members to guide delegate discussion towards meaningful ends, and it is therefore the responsibility of the student delegates to recognize the suzerainty of the chair in decisions regarding the rules of parliamentary procedure as well as fostering the chairs aim to provide meaningful development of debate within the various committees.

The conference will constitute 30 percent of each student delegate’s final grade; students will be evaluated by faculty advisors, the Secretary General, and Director General concerning the level of their participation during the conference. Student delegates will be assessed 10 percent according to their knowledge of their country and its stances, 10 percent for their knowledge of their committee and its issues, 10 percent for their knowledge and application of parliamentary procedure.

Academic Honesty:

Tantamount to the integrity of the classroom is the honesty of students in the work they create, plagiarism in papers and other pertinent materials is unacceptable and will result in a failing grade. Be it from written sources, another student, or electronic media if it is not cited in the work it will be considered plagiarism; for a more complete definition of plagiarism, and help avoiding it, visit www.plagiarism.org.

Attendance: Your presence and participation in class is imperative given the limited amount of time we have to prepare for the conference. Attendance will be taken during each class. One unexcused absence will be permitted. Each additional unexcused absence will result in a drop of one letter grade. Excused absences are medical (with a doctor’s note), university sanctioned event where your attendance is required (for athletes, choir members, etc) or family emergency (documentation required).

Grading:

Class attendance 10%, Quizzes 20%, Draft Resolutions 10%, and Papers 30%

The additional 30% of your grade will be based upon your attendance as well as SG, DG and advisor evaluations during the conference. Evaluations during the conference are based on: Parli-Pro skills 10%, Country knowledge 10%, Attendance and participation 10%

Quizzes:

There will be a quiz at the end of every class period. The quizzes will test your understanding of information contained in the CIA World Fact book, BBC Country Profiles, and assigned readings. Quizzes will also contain current events questions. Delegates are encouraged to follow Middle Eastern news from The Economist, Washington Post, Middle East Times, Le Monde Diplomatique, Foreign Affairs, Al Jazeera Online, Chicago World Tribune, Le Monde and the New York Times.
Course and Conference Summary:

The course will be taught and run by the Lecturer and the Staff (student Leadership). It will be augmented with guest lectures and presentations from staff throughout the University in various academic disciplines, as well as members of the community with experience and understanding of the Arab world. Subsequent to the conference, delegates and staff will be asked to write a one-page summary of their experience in the class and a one-page summary of their experience during the conference. These summaries will be due on the final day of class, April 15th.

Draft Resolutions:

In addition to the two papers, delegates will also write three 1 page resolutions prior to the conference. One resolution will be done in class. The other two will be done as homework and will be required to be typed and turned in the following class period. Each resolution is worth 5% of your grade and must be approved by the SG before the final grade is given. The resolutions must contain at least five perambulatory clauses and eight operative clauses and follow the guidelines laid out by the National Council on US-Arab Relations (NCUSAR).
